Pastor’s Corner

Dear Parishioners,

Church security: If someone with “bad intentions” enters our building, how should we respond? A full discussion of security is not possible here, but let’s begin to give an answer. Firstly, we might distinguish three kinds of disruptions: visual, verbal and violent.

1. Visual Disruption: Suppose 5 guys show up wearing brightly colored sashes or wigs. (No, I’m not talking about the K of C regalia!) An ostentatious display is a form of protest. Protesters are not part of worship. Anyone not here to worship is trespassing. Therefore, the protesters should be escorted from the premises as soon as possible.

   How should this be done? The ushers play an important role here. However, these situations are so important, that ALL men of the parish need to stand up and fulfill their role as protectors. (Is this ‘sexist’?) Whatever, we repudiate unapologetically the Marxist hatred of our created complementarity.) Every man is in the “Security Detail” and, as such, you act with my authority. Is this dangerous? You bet. Love and friendship demand sacrifice.

   Therefore, if any man notices a visual protest, he will initiate a response. This means not being shy, self-conscious, or hesitating—necessary qualities in a protector. He will gather assistance. Tapping another man on the shoulder and saying, “Security” will be an unmistakable signal to him a situation needs attention. This man, in turn, will follow without hesitation. Other men will also follow.

   The security detail will surround the protesters and a leader will quietly point to the back door and say: “I need to see you outside.” Please note that this is an “I statement.” Saying, “You need to leave” creates a defensive response and a no-win argument: No, I don’t; yes, you do; no I don’t, etc. “I (or we) need to see you outside” creates no argument. If this request is made with the security detail in support, it is powerful without aggression.

   Escort the protesters outside and explain that trespassing is illegal and make the final “I statement: “In the name of the PASTOR, I require you to vacate the premises immediately.” Escort them all the way out the driveway. Someone take pictures or video. If there’s any resistance at all, call 911 and report “threatening and dangerous trespassing.” Please note that...
